SELECT MISCELLANY.

Washington Female Lobby.

BY DONN PIATT.

Any time during the session of Congress one ante room to the Senate Chamber is filled with females gathered in groups about the learned law makers, attracting them singly. Some of them are wives or daughters of the Senators, some are strangers visiting the Capitol; but the majority is made up of woman pressing claims before Congress. To get a better look at these feminine agents, one must visit the lobby to the rear of the Speaker's chair in the House of Representatives. It is a long low corridor under the reporter's gallery, finished and furnished in the same florid style peculiar to the entire building. On the same side are doors opening to the House, on the other the Speaker's private room, originally intended for the families of the members, but of late so invaded and occupied by the female lobby, that families of members shun the place, and the Speaker himself is driven to the Clerk's office when he wishes to see a friend or write a note.

Here we find the female lobby in all its glory. It appears clad in the tints of the rainbow and fairly dazzles one with its display of jewelry. Some of this is cheap, but most of it is really costly. To the man of the world the dress is a shade too vulgar and the manner slightly loud and coarse. Some are young and fresh, but the majority are on the wrong side of forty, with a hard look about their faces, and lines that are tracks of tried feelings and past disappointments.

The average Congressman is not a man of the world. He marries before he achieves greatness, and his knowledge is limited to a very primitive social condition, where he encountered and wed the plain, homely little woman who shares his elevation without adding much to its dignity or grace. When such a man comes within reach of the more ordinary specimens of these Delilahs, he is somewhat intoxicated by the attention, and votes away vast domains, subsidies to huge monopolies, under the influence of two tender eyes or the confidential tap of a sandal wood fan. The study of the average Congressman from a social, or, indeed, any point of view, is not only of interest, but important, if we wish to understand and appreciate the workings of our free institutions. Taken from the common walks of life, he finds himself translated out of a little office where poverty waits on business, and an humble home, barely possessed of the ordinary comforts of life, to the gorgeous magnificence of a marble palace—gorgeous beyond his wildest dreams. As he approaches its many entrances, obsequious servants bend before him and the magic doors swing on easy hinges, as if conscious of his rights and privileges; nimble pages obey his slightest wish and anticipate his needs. His mail matter suddenly swells to an enormous extent. The average Congressman appreciates the mail matter. It costs him nothing and indicates his greatness. In the committee room, where his delegated body reposes in a velvet cushioned chair, under ceilings where gorgeous frescoings weary the eye, he has a realizing greatness. This is not diminished when the committee, after half an hour's heavy labor on public affairs, draws the bottle from a hidden recess of the heavily carved walnut closets; a bottle with which to refresh their gigantic minds.

The average Congressman revels in stationery. The man who never read a book with a taste for reading, and regaded pen, ink and paper as punishments, suddenly wakens to a thirst for stationery. He seizes on hot-pressed satin surface, gilt edge, French, English and Yankee paper! How he does eye and grasp the snowy envelopes neatly packed and put at his disposal! He makes a requisition for his stationery in the house and sends it to his boarding house to astonish his wife. In the committee room the clerk, if he is an amiable man, draws other and further stationery for him.

Much depends upon this. Once the Committee on Commerce was honored by my presence as a clerk to the same. Some days after I was duly installed the messenger entered the committee room laden with stationery, in response to my requisition.

"Here Colonel," said the obliging messenger, "lock this up and don't let the Congressmen have any; they waste it so."

But it is when the average Congressman first comes in contact with the female lobby, that he realizes his translation. These are to him refined, fascinating and beautiful creatures. His poor little homely wife fades into naught. His life seems to have been barren until then—and now he regrets the early marriage that shuts him out from a union with one of these elegant women!

There are two sorts of processes through which fraudulent legislation is perfected. One is called "ring," which means a combination of rogues for some purpose; the other is called the "lobby," and designates agents living here, and employed by rings and individuals to push their evil schemes through Congress.

I have made the acquaintance of several specimens of those two sorts of jackals, and propose photographing them some day to enlighten my readers as to the nature of this branch of our National Legislature, that costs the people more than the legitimate law making power, the judiciary and the executive.

I was turning this over in my mind during the late session, while I sat on the sofa in the Cave of the Winds, listening to the blowing to and fro about me, when I happened to cast my eyes to the ladies' gallery above, and out of the gloom saw a memory come in the shape of a fair face. These galleries were not constructed with an eye to effect, so far as female loveliness is concerned, as the dim light from above gives a ghastly paleness that not only destroys the beauty but seriously damages the expression. Under the circumstances the face failed to locate itself, and my memory was dim and uncertain as the flashes of a former life that come to us at times between sleeping and waking.

I was so disturbed and haunted by this memory, that I left my seat and sauntered into the gallery, seating myself near my fair friend, and without rudely staring I found my mind gradually gathering up the disjointed fragments of the past, until the fair face was framed in and located. It was a very sweet face, not so young as it was but with a prevailing expression of childlike innocence. Add to this a manner of great refinement, set off and adorned in the extreme of the fashion, but subdued to the best taste and most artistic harmonizing of colors, and I had an old acquaintance before me. Although I looked my fair friend in the face, I saw that she had either forgotten me or was not disposed to renew the acquaintance. She was talking in a quiet, easy manner to a well known member of Congress, and I considerately withdrew as if I had been looking in the face of an utter stranger, instead of one well known in times gone by. An hour afterwards I happened to be on the entrance to the Senate Chamber, where the multitude of marbles steps seemed to run out and flow down,

The Beaver Argus.

J. WEYAND, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Beaver, Pa., November 13, 1872.

MR. BLACK, the Temperance candidate for President of the United States, received 91 votes in the county for that office.

HON. SCHUYLER COLFAX, who should have been, but was not, the Republican candidate for Vice President, announces in a card published on the 7th of November, that he is not, as reported, a candidate for the United States Senatorship of Indiana. He says: "I am not a candidate for any position Senatorial or Editorial, State or National."

IT is a pity that the newspapers cannot be content to abandon their inventions about the failing health of the Chief Justice. He is in quite as good condition as last Spring, is discharging his regular duties, and can be seen any fine day walking from his country residence to the Capitol and back—a display of physical energy too often not emulated by young fellows of half his years.

HEAR of a merry marriage bell which too soon began dolefully to toll! Bernard Hargrave, in Pittsburgh, on Thursday, Oct. 21, was married, and on the 6th of November he swallowed a great dose of sulphuric acid, and was discovered in his workshop dying. The cause of this sudden disgust of life is unknown, as the young man, before his death, was "solemnly reticent" about the matter.

ONE of the most destructive fires ever witnessed in this country, visited Boston on last Saturday evening, and continued burning in the business part of the city until Sabbath noin, at which time its headway was checked. Nearly all the heavy dry goods stores were consumed. The loss is estimated at one hundred millions of dollars, about twelve millions of which was covered by insurance. Among many other prominent buildings destroyed was Fannil Hall.

THE Hon. Richard Vaux, chairman of the committee appointed by the state central democratic committee to investigate the outrageous frauds perpetrated at the October election, has issued a call for a meeting to be held at Bolton's hotel, Harrisburg, on Monday evening, November 11th, at seven o'clock, for the purpose of organization, conference and action. Every member of the committee should be present.

IF our rural neighbors are desirous of knowing how our law-makers at Washington are "moved" to pass laws which conflict with the interests of their constituents, they can learn something to their advantage by reading an article on one of the outside pages of the ARGUS, headed the "Female Lobyist" and clipped from Don Piatt's paper at Washington—The Capital.

THE Liberal Republican and Democratic State committees of Ohio, are to meet in Columbus on the 15th of the present month, to determine their future course in regard to State and National politics. Their deliberations will be important, as it is believed they will take the iniatory steps toward the formation of a new National political organization.

SENATOR BUTLER stated publicly, in Beaver, on the night of the last election, that he was now going to give the Beaver Falls fraud matter his attention, and before long, the public would be surprised at the developments he would make, and the parties which would be implicated by the exposure. We beg Mr. B., to proceed, but we venture the prediction that he will do nothing of the kind. His little harangue at the time referred to was only for buncombe, a fact which the people will see clearly demonstrated in his silence touching that matter in the future. Stick a pin there.

IN 1856 a coalition of parties sprang into the field with great enthusiasm, and nominated a National ticket. For a time the enthusiasm of its organization was infectious, and it promised to sweep the country. But in October it was crushed in Pennsylvania, and the overwhelming defeat which naturally followed, a month afterward, was supposed to have destroyed it. Four years later it ruled the country. Defeat had consolidated it into the party of victory. Whether yesterday's defeat is to have a similar result may not be confidently asserted; but it is certain that nothing which occurred yesterday proves more against the future success of the Liberal party than the election of James Buchanan proved against the future success of the Republican party.—New York Tribune, Nov. 6.

A GENERAL conference of Israelites has just been held at Brussels, at which many questions affecting that people were considered. The Roumanian delegates submitted a report on the condition of the people of that faith in their provinces. The idea of a general emigration to the United states seem to be abandoned for the present. The impression prevails that a more enlightened and tolerant sentiment is being developed in the East toward people of the Jewish faith, and that under the pressure of foreign opinion greater freedom of conscience and liberty of religious expression and worship will be accorded them. Should this not prove to be the case, there is no doubt but at an early day there will be a general negira to this country.

THE Postmaster General has announced that it will require $2,500,000 more to meet the expenses of the postal service this year than it did last year.

The Secretary of the Treasury also tells us that the reduction of the public debt for the month of November, this year, will fall some five or six million dollars below what was expected.—He says this is "owing to the draft upon the treasury, arising chiefly from pushing all out-door work of the government, such as that on public buildings, rivers, light-houses &c.," But will not the intelligent people of the country sooner believe that the deficiencies here referred to arise from the fact that the missing money was used to carry the recent elections? Everybody knows that money flowed like water in this State before the second Tuesday of October, and as the Yerkes failure "had cleaned the State Treasury out," the National Treasury had to be opened and "our Camerons" invited to help themselves. How do the people like the idea of having been bought with their own money to make Hartranft Governor of the State.

OUR readers are, no doubt, ere this apprised of the result of the election on the 5th inst. General Grant received the voters of 31 States, giving him 304 electoral votes, and Greeley received the voters of 6 States, having 62 electoral votes. The States voting for Grant were Alabama, Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Nebraska, Nevada, New-Hampshire, New-Jersey, New-York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Vermont, Virginia, and Wisconsin. The States voting for Greeley were Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Missouri and Texas.

This result, though not in so sweeping a form, has for some weeks past been apparent to almost everybody. In fact the October elections "took the starch right out" of Mr. Greeley's supporters, not only in Pennsylvania, but it seems everywhere else. After the elections referred to little interest was taken anywhere in the fight, and the rank and file of the democracy never having had a very tender passion for Mr. Greeley, measurably suffered the November election to go by default. On the theory, then, that the sparrows never fall without the direct supervision of Divine Providence, it is fair to assume that the result attained is the best for all concerned. At all events it must be accepted as such, and instead of whining or repining, it is the part of good citizenship gracefully to acquiesce in the will of the majority, take what good there is in the event and point out in the future and urge the adoption of the reforms contended for by the defeated party. This at least shall be our course.

GENERAL GEORGE G. MEADE, the distinguished soldier and former commander of the Army of the Potomac, died at Philadelphia on last Wednesday. His age at the time of his death was 59 years. During the first years of the war he was not one of our prominent Generals, but he arose to rank and distinction gradually, and in June, 1863, when Lee was advancing up the Shenandoah Valley to invade Maryland and Pennsylvania, Gen. Meade was suddenly and unexpectedly called to succeed Gen. Hooker in the command of the Army of the Potomac, numbering 100,000 men. He advanced through Maryland on parallel lines with Lee's army, which finally, marching eastward, struck (July 1) the head of Meade's column under Gen. Reynolds, near Gettysburg. The fight for position which occurred, and which resulted in the defeat and death of Reynolds, and the retirement of his column through Gettysburg to a strong position south of the town, is generally spoken of as the first day's fight of the great battle which ensued at Gettysburg. The whole army advanced to this position during the night, and the next day Sickles's corps went into action and was driven back, the day closing with the advantage on the side of the confederates. The third day opened with an advance of the Union right under Slocum, who retook ground he had lost and rested upon it. Soon after the Confederate artillery opened and plowed the Union lines for two hours, when the great confederate column of assault emerging from behind the batteries pressed swiftly toward the Union lines, and was repulsed with great slaughter.

This reverse decided the day, and when the Confederates regained their lines the battle had been won by the Union forces. Gen. Meade, who displayed masterly ability throughout the engagement, reported his loss in these three bloody days at 2,834 killed, 13,709 wounded, and 6,643 missing.

He took 13,621 prisoners and 24,978 small arms. Lee promptly retreated, and escaped before the detachments sent by Meade in pursuit could arrest his progress.

Gen. Meade was promoted to be a Brigadier-General of the regular army by a commission dated July 3, 1863. About the 18th of July he moved his army across the Potomac into Virginia, where he had several skirmishes with the enemy in October and November, 1863. He was in command of the Army of the Potomac in its operations against Richmond in 1864. "I tried as far as possible," observed Gen. Grant, to "leave Gen. Meade in independent command of the Army of the Potomac. My instructions for that army were all through him, and were general in their nature, leaving all the details and the execution to him. The campaigns that followed proved him to be the right man in the right place." The army of which he had immediate command fought great battles at the Wilderness, Spotsylvania Court-house, and Cold Harbor, and was employed many months in the siege of Petersburg. In August, 1864, he was appointed a Major-General of the regular army. He was placed in command of the Third Military District, comprising Georgia, Florida, and Alabama, in 1867, and was subsequently appointed commander of the Atlantic Military Division, having its headquarters at Philadelphia. Gen. Meade was tall, soldier-like in bearing and general appearance. He was held in high esteem by his fellow-citizens in Philadelphia, and was popular among his former companions in arms.

Boasting, we trust, will not be imputed to us, when we add, that General Meade was our old commander, and that we were a participant, in all the battles save one, fought by the Army of the Potomac after he took command of it in 1863, until the final surrender at Appomatox Court House. In the terrible fighting from the Rapidan, through the Wilderness, to the James, we learned to love General Meade better than any commander our forces had. Peace to his ashes, and may the memory of his valor and great deeds live long after his death.

IT MAY be interesting to those who have almost forgotton how a gold coin looks, to know that the Philadelphia mint has commenced melting 1,000,000 one dollar gold pieces, to be converted into pieces of a larger donomination. Twenty millions of these pieces are to be used.

HERE AND THERE.

—A young lady named Clara Cupples, of Licking township, Clarion county, committed suicide last week by shooting herself. She was living with a family named Logue, and after getting up in the morning took a loaded rifle, which was standing in the room where she slept, and placing the muzzle of the gun in her mouth discharged it, producing instant death. The poor girl had been troubled for some time with domestic affliction. Her mother died about a year ago, leaveing the younger children to the care of Clara, who was the oldest daughter. It is alleged that on account of differences with her father, who, it is repoted, treated her unkindly she left home and her mind was so affected by her misfortunes that she committed the rash act which so suddenly terminated her life.

—The deposits of gold at the United States Mint in philadelphia, for October were of the value of $64,416-08, and the silver deposits and purchases $273,860 42—making a total of $388,216 57. The coinage for the month includes $315,500 in gold, $185,493 in silver, $43 500 of nickel, and $9,100 of bronze. Besides this coinage there passed though the Mint, in gold bars $1,998 03 and in silver bars $22,504 24, giving a total of coin and bars for the month of the value of $578,095 27. Total number of pieces, 2,099,450.

—It will be remembered how Chicago was agitated by the marriage of Miss Ella Hancock, daughter of J. L. Hancock, an eminent packer, to her father's coachman, Thomas Lynden a native of Great Britain The matter has been in the Supreme Court, on the report of a Master, and has caused further agitation. In every way, the case is a singular one, Mrs. Lynden at present is not more than 15 years old, childish in appearence and manner. Her husband is 35 years of age and bald at that. He used to take Miss Ella out to drive alone, and improved the opportunity to win her confidence. He told her among other things that he was a Prince in disguise, and when she expressed admiration for a beautiful house he would say:" All right! you shall have that house after we are married." After a deal of this surreptitious wooing, Thomas got a license from the County Clerk, swearing that his intended bride was over 18, and the parties were married. Ellen returned to her family and never cohabited with her husband or acknowledged him as such. Finally, she told the secret to her sister, and Thomas was kicked out of the house. She has utterly refused to live with him. The Court, upon technical grounds, refused to set the marriage aside, but gave the complainant leave to amend the bill into a petition for divorce. Lynden by his attorneys declares that his wife is coerced in the action which she has taken. It doesn't make much difference what he declares, as he is evidently, upon the facts, a scoundrel for whom the State prison would be a far more luxurious retreat than he deserves.

—Mr. John Dean, who married the daughter of Mr. Boker, a New York millionaire some twelve or fifteen years ago, he being at the time her father's coachman, writes to papers of that city concerning the statement made that the woman Dean, who recently committed suicide in Washington city. was his wife, to the affect that he proposed to hold the authors and promulgators of the cruel fabrication to a strict accountability. He says he is not concious of having done anything, at any time, to forfeit his self-respect or the good opinion of his fellow men, and he does not propose that these cowardly and wanton attacks upon himself and family shall go longer uncontradicted and unpunished.

—Here is an awful case of procrastination. Mr. William Urquhart, late editor of The Ottowa Times, has been presented with a beautiful inkstand and gold pen on the occasion of his retirement from journalism. It seems to us that the true time to present these articles to a man is when he is going into journalism, not going out of it.

—Mr. Fletcher Harper, Jr., of the publishing firm of Harper Brothers, will shortly marry Miss Tacey McDonald, daughter of ex-Senator McDonald, of Arkansas. Mr Harper is one of the youngest, and is said to be the best educated of the Harper family. He is about 25 years of age, speaks three or four languages with fluency, and has spent several years in foreign travel. The marriage, which will take place in a few weeks in New York, will, it is said, be one of the most ostentatious ever seen in the country.

—The Cincinnati Commercial says: President Grant, will not, perhaps, be much obliged to us for our good wishes; but we hope he will be able to repair in his second term the blunders that discredit his first. And we will venture, in our high capacity as a disinterested observer and independent well wisher, to suggest to him that it would be the par of wisdom for him not to regard his reelection exclusively in the light of a personal triumph and vindication. he ought to be aware that his champions though this campaign have had a hard time in excusing the weakness and failings on his part which they have been constrained to acknowledge. The tone of his advocates has been in many respects necessarily apologetic. This has been especially so in regard to his personal vanities and indulgencies—his estimation of his election, in the first place, as a personal compliment—his view of the public patronage as an auriferous plaier for the benefit of his relatives and favorites—his concern for mere personal acquaintances rather than for those who had done the State or the party or both some service.

—A reparkable criminal is described by The Ashville (N. C.) Pioneer—the ex-Rev. William Wilson, of Yancey county, who has just been sent for nine years to the Penitentiary. Before the war, he was a Baptist minister in good standing, and commanded the respect and esteem of a large circle of acquaintances. Domestic infelicity led him to abandon his wife. He thus fell into disfavor with the religious community, so that he abandoned the ministry and betook himself to highway robbery. Singularity enough, he goes to prison for robbing a wagon in 1865. For five years he evaded arrest, was then tried, carried his case up on law points, and now the verdict is sustained. Speaking of this unfortunate man, we may mention that the ex-Rev. Mr. Green, one of the most noted convicts in the Indiana State Prison, was discharged on the 25th ult., by expiration of time. His crime was forgery. He was once a Baptist preacher of some note, and is a man of fine talents. In prison he has been the leader of various moral reforms, and has been especiall active in organizing a temperance society among the inmates.

OAKLAND GROVE, BEAVER CO., PA., NEW BRIGHTON, Nov 11, 1872.

COL. J. WEYAND, Editor "Beaver Argus," and to the honest citizens of Beaver county, GREETING:

James S. Rutan of Beaver returned to his office (the Beaver Conservative), and on last Sunday printed a circular denying that he was a party to the Beaver Falls fraud. Now, reader, as I have never written nor had printed one word about the above named counterfeit which was not in every particular true, and to give him a fair and open chance to prove himself guiltless of the intended fraud at that place, I make him the following offer: That J. S. Rutan give timely notice to Captain Tom Bradford, of New Brighton, that he will appear at the office of an alderman or justice of the peace in the borough of Beaver Falls, on any day or hour between the 13th and 22d day of this month, and then and there make oath that he did not—in company with H. C. Patterson—at any time purchase, at a certain place in that borough, a bottle of liquor; and immediately thereafter, with that bottle, go to the room of the trio from Philadelphia, at the Metropolitan Hotel. If he will do this, I will have several respectable citizens of the town—Grant Republicans, Greeley Republicans and Democrats—present to confront him, and establish by their statements under oath the truth of that charge against him. To excuse himself Rutan says he called, the night in question, on Governor Bard of Tennessee. The citizens whom I propose to have present will swear that Governor Bard was not at the Metropolitan on the night Rutan and Patterson were seen taking their bottle to the Philadelphia ballot-box stuffers' room at that hotel.

Now, Mr. Rutan, come to time, or stand convicted of association with James M. Allen, alias Specks, and his two associates in contemplated fraud. The note you presented Hart upon the strength of which—instead of a petition from the citizens of Beaver Falls—that officer appointed Jas. M. Allen return judge, is sufficient of itself to establish Rutan's complicity with those scoundrels; but, in his recent circular he further commits himself, because he has drawn the witnesses against him to the front, and they will face the music.

Quay and Imbrie say: "Rutan is sure to put his foot in it, if not watched," and this is one of the many foul pools in which he has immersed that member, and out of which he is too weak a vessel to extricate it. He is guilty, and a majority of the community are convinced of that fact.

Now, Mr. Rutan, while you are endeavoring to make a scape-goat of J. L. B. Dawson, and a useful tool of John C. Hart, you are simple enough to think you can escape public execration! Poor, simple Ostrich, with your head in the sand you imagine you are safe! You are not only making a scape-goat of Dawson, but it is well known you and your master—Quay—contemplate his removal from the Beaver Falls Post-office, and the appointment of some other tool of the ring in his stead. Of course there is no citizen of that borough who has the right to suggest who shall be postmaster except the Pattersons, who claim to rule that town; and you say, in your circular, they were your partners in the passage of the iniquitous law by means of which you intended to perpetrate a great fraud on the people.

Mr. Rutan, the letter you publish, purporting to be written by me, I have to say, I never wrote such a letter as is there published; but, if you have a letter written by me to McClure, either you, or some other of Cameron's thieves, stole it from the Philadelphia post-office. As to the words thief and liar, used in that circular, I can afford to let them pass, because you have never pointed out a single fraudulent or dishonest act of mine; while I have proven you to be guilty of everything I have charged you with, and especially of complicity in the contemplated Beaver Falls Fraud, and the demanding of money for your vote for the appropriation to pay for printing the Soldier's history of Pennsylvania.

W. W. IRWIN.

Sound Political Doctrine.

The annual report of the Board of Directors of the Union League for 1870 contains the following important declaration of principles. We agree with the Press that after reading it, the recent action of the Campaign Committee of the League in reference to the Republicans who refused to support Hartranft and the Ring, looks like the broadest satire:

"We shall be ready to advocate any judicious measures that may lead to a better plan for the nomination of candidates for elective offices, believing the present system to be one of the gross abuses of the time, which, while it invites the worst class of men into the political arena, with equal force and success excludes from political preferment the best class of our citizens. This it is that has made the name of politician a byword and driven common patriotism and even simple honesty to turn with disgust from the doors of the caucus and the nominating convention. It is time that American citizens seriously pondered this condition of political affairs and threw into some opposing movement the weight of their influence. Let our members be assured that whenever the outraged public, forgetting for the time its political hostilities, shall demand a return to the civic virtue of our forefathers, the Union League will be the first to hail and to join in that great moral movement."

This sentiment was highly applauded at the time by the North American, the Pittsburgh Commercial, and other papers which, in the late campaign, were among the most subservient and unscrupulous organs of the Ring. Their strong utterances were copied by this paper pending the October election. The Express endorsed that doctrine then, never stultified itself by ignoring it in practice, and still adheres to it. It is the platform on which the party must conduct its future operations if it would preserve its own existence.—Lancaster Express.

Astounding Revelations in the Court of Common Pleas—Wholesale Alterations of Election Returns in Favor of Hartranft.

From The Philadelphia Inquirer

In the Court of Common Pleas, before Judge Finletter, on motion of E. Spencer Miller, esq., and upon filing of the following affidavit, his Honor ordered the Prothonotary of the Court to appear on Saturday, the 9th inst., and produce all the returns of the election of the 8th of October last, and account for and explain the the absense of those not produced, and the apparent alteration of the papers:

Albert L. Williams, being duly sworn according to law, deposes and says: That he is 23 years of age, and resides at No. 333 McIlvaine-st., Philadelphia. That the above alterations are sometimes made by mere changing the figures, and sometimes by erasures, and are generally apparent at a moment's glance. Only those which are beyond all doubt have been hereinabove mentioned.

The changes seem so be, in a great measure confined to the Gubernatorial candidates, the others receiving the regular party vote.

That some of the envelopes containing the hourly lists of the divisions are missing, and some of the division returns appear to be altered upon every candidate, but the correct return cannot be accurately ascertained, and is, therefore omitted.

The changes in the returns as aforesaid amount to a difference of 3,310 votes.

ALBERT L. WILLIAMS.

Sworn and subscribed before me, this first day of November, 1872.

GEORGE T. DEISS, Deputy Proth'y.

From The Philadelphia Press (Editorial).

When so large a majority was declared for the republican state ticket on the 8th of October, we stated that we did not regard the result as fraudulent. Our judgment rested on the belief that Gen. Grant's prestige and the demoralization of the Democracy in the consequence of the surrender of Baltimore, had done the work; but every hour's subsequent experience has proved a system of frauds unparalleled in the records of elections in this country. The last evidence is that revealed in the Court of Common Pleas on Saturday last, reported at length in our local department.

The affidavit read before Judge Finletter shows that various alterations, erasures, and changes of figures are apparent in the returns! that some of the envelopes containing the hourly lists of the divisions are missing; that many of the returns cannot be found, and that numerous of them are not signed by the proper officers required to certify to their correctness. The exposures of frauds perpetrated are confined to only 35 divisions of 12 wards. The plan was systematic, and it is safe to assert that there were numerous cases, as yet undiscovered, of alteration of the vote in the other 324 divisions. The divisions in which the frauds were perpetrated include one-tenth of the vote of the city. If they were equal in extent in only one-half of the others, and fraud in the great majority of them is not only possible but probable, the vote of Philadelphia was falsified at least 15,000 on the evening of the 8th of October by the election officers alone. This is exclusive of the repeating, personating, and ballot-box stuffing by the tools of the Ring on the same day. We now verily believe that an examination of the entire returns and a contest in which the frauds committed, but not apparent upon them, could be exposed, would put the stamp of guilt upon at least 500 men in Philadelphia, and show that Charles R. Buckalew carried Philadelphia by a clear and ample majority.

Hotel Profits in New York.

A New York correspondent of the Chicago Tribune states the Fifth Avenue Hotel proper rents for $200,000 a year; the Metropolitan, $165,000; the St Nicholas, $87,000 with annual profits of $175,000; Grand Central, $65,000, annual profits $150,000; Astor House, $75,000, annual profits $85,000; New York Hotel, 80,000, profits $90,000; Gilsey House, $85,000, annual profits $4,000. This correspondent adds: The following hotels make profits as appended: Albermarle, $30,000; Westminister, $30,000; Grand, $30,000 (rent reduced to 45,000); Clifford, $25,000; United States, $15,000; Belmont, $30,000; Merchants, $35,000; Mansion House, Brooklyn, $25,000; Everett, New York, $50,000; Pirrepont, Brooklyn, $25,000; American, Boston, $30,000; Congress Hall, Cape May, $30,000 (1872); Stockton, Cape May, $57,000; Congress Hall, Saratoga, $85,000; The largest hotel in the United States as to room capacity, is probably the Grand Union at saratoga. Mr A. T. Steward's new Woman Hotel, New York, has about 600 rooms. The new Winsor, New York, has about 400 rooms.

ROMANTIC SUIT.

A Lawsuit Involving an Estate of Over a Million Dollars Compromised by the Payment of One Hundred Thousand Dollars —Truth Stranger than Fiction.

[From the Louisville Ledger.]

A very remarkable lawsuit which has been for some time pending in the courts of Kentucky and Indiana was brought to a termination a day or two ago by the agreemeui of the parties to the suit of a compromise.

It will be remembered that some years ago a German gentleman named Gustavis Schurman resided in Louisville. He was the possessor of a considerable amount of property, lived in good style, drove fine horses, sported a footman in livery and claimed to be a German nobleman. He was married to a German lady, had a young and interesting family, and to all appearances was prosperous and happy. But, as in so many families, there was a ghost in this one, the secret of whose existence did not come to light until the death of the principal actor in this little social drama.

Gustavus was a resident of Aix-la-Chapelle, a little city in Rhenish Prussia, pursued the business of cloth manufacturer, and was what migth be considered well off, his real and personal estate being worth about 140,000 thalers or about $100,000. He loved, or thought, he loved a lady named Amelia Eosrhardine Goll, daughter of one of the royal counselors, and in 1845 he proposed marriegre, was accepted, and the marriage was performed in that year. An ante-nuptial contract was entered into between the two, according to the code Napoleon, which was in force at Aix-la- Chapelle, by which, in case of the death of the husband before the wife, she became entitled to one-eight in fee simple of his entire estate, and one-forth of the estate during her life-time, besides having a community of interest in all acquisitions to the common fund after marriage, which community of interest would entitle her to one-half.

The two lived hapily together for some time, or apparently so. The life of the wife, however, was soon rendered wretched by the discovery that another had supplanted her in her husband's affections. This, however, was not exactly the case; it was she in reality who had taken the place which nature had assigned to another. Schurman had to his employ a number of factory girls, one of whom, Catherine Bengels, was possessed with more than ordinary beauty. The impressible young bachelor was smitten with her beauty, but the inexorable laws of society governing the little Rhenish province in which he lived held over him a terror of proscription which prevented him from doing that which his heart prompted. He loved Catherine Bengels, and his love was returned; but he married Amelia E. Goll, who brought to him a proud name and extensive dower. But for the crime which Schurman had committed against his nature he was ample punished. His married life was unhappy, while his love for the lowly Catherine Bengels became even more intense, now that it was impossible for them to be legally united. They met clandestinely, and the intercourse coming to the knowledge of the unhappy wife, she became distressed beyond measure, unbraided her husband with his perfidy, and threatened divorce. This rendered the husband desperate, and, openly avowing his attachment, took Catherine Bengels into his domicile. Becoming discontented with this condition of things, Schurman decided upon emigrating to America, and came to this country. He returned in 1849, and gathering together what property he could, departed in 1850 for the United States, in company with Catherine Bengels. Before his departure his wife instituted suit for a divorce. On the arrival of Schurman he proceeded to Louisville, where he took up his residence, and sued for a divorce from his wife Amelia, which was granted, when he immediately married the woman who had eloped with him.

Gustavus Schurman purchased real estate in Indianapolis and Louisville, and by his tact and business management increased his wealth to over a million of dollars. At the time of his death he had seven children, two by his first wife and five by his second wife. In making his will he left his Prussian property to his German heirs, and his american property to his American heirs.

The first wife, Amelia, learning of the death of her husband, obtained possession by a legal process, of the Prussian estate, and sued for her share, as her marriage contract, of this decedent's estate in America. Her son, Gustavus F. Schurman, represented her with power of attorney, and the ablest lawyers in the city were employed to prosecute the case. The pleadings were voluminous, and a vast amount of property was involved; great interest was manifested in the result. It appeared, however, that as the case progressed the plaintiff weakened somewhat in enforcing her claims. Being in a foreign country, and copies of proceedings in foreign courts being frequently rendered necessary as testimony in the American courts, she became wearied and finally agreed to compromise by accepting, in lieu of all claims the sum of one hundred thousand dollars.

WOODHULL AND CLAFFLIN.

How they passed Sunday—Sympathizers and Sight-seers.

During yesterday, says the New York Herald of Monday, a great many visitors called upon the imprisoned sister brokers and stirpiculturists at Ludlow street jail, Among them were thier fatherand mother; the not to be obscured Georg F. Train; their counsel, William F. How, A. Hunnah and Judge Reynert; the artist of an illustrated paper, about twenty reporters, and quite a number of strangers who came it is likely, to offer spurious condolence, that they might get a sight of the notorious woman. Notwithstanding the influx of visitors there was yet about the domicile of Mrs. Woodhul and Tennie C. a gloom that pervades all prisons and wich affected everybody with despondency. This feeling was not alleviated by the surroundings of the apartment of the sisters.

The prisoners, whose cells are on "Fifth avenue," the row on which the apartments of Mrs. Woodhull and Miss Claflin are, gathered about and scrutinized their visitors. Among them was Lagrave, the swindler, who was lately brought from France, whither he had fled for immunity from punishment for his crimes.

The Herald reporter, on entering their cell last evening, discovered Vic. and Tennie seated on a cot with snowy covers. With them was Mrs. Woodhull's child, a handsome girl of twelve years of age. Both the sisters expressed their willingness to suffer for what they conceive to be right. Their punishment they declare the seed from which is to spring the perfect flower of a new religion of humanity. But other cosiderations were not absent from their minds, and they deplored their arrest and the seizure of their office, as they feared certain remittances of money would be stolen. Mrs Woodhull informed the reporter that several eminent lawyers had offered to devote their services gratuitously to her defence, but that she had refused them, with thanks. Before he left Mrs. Woodhull gave the reporter to understand that Mr. Challis is about to withdraw the action which he has commenced against herself and Tennie C.

THE CRIME OF OCTOBER.

How Hartranft Was Elected

At last the monstrous frauds, by which twenty thousand majority in Philadelphia and thirty-five thousand majority in the state were counted up for Hartranft, are coming out in a light so vived and glaring as to startle the most stolid and blind of the citizens of Pennsylvania. The processes of addition, division and silence for hoisting the Evans-Yerkes candidate into the office of governor are revealed in all their infamy. Read the disclosures made by Mr. Alfred Williams and filed in the court of common pleas of Philadelphia on Saturday last. In reading rememember, too, that this does not come from democratic sources, but is the result of the investigations of the municipal reform association, conducted under the authority of the court. In forty-one divisions of thirteen wards the fraudulent alterations of the returns make a difference of 3,310 votes in favor of Hartranft. The business-like array of these forgeries running through the returns is shocking. Such a revelation of fraud, forgery and perjury never has been made. A guilding hand is visible througout the whole of it. It is evident that the manipulators of the returns in the precincts were acting under the direction of a master. The system under which the operation was performed in these thirteen wards extended throughout all the wards of the city with their four hundred precincts. It will be remarked that some of the wards in which the frauds were most transparent in the returns have not ye been reached. The work of unearthing the villainies of the Philadelphia ring in October has only commenced. The report of Mr. Williams is merely the first installment.

The false counting, be it remembered, is only a portion of this gigantic crime on the franchise. What the repeaters plying in all the wards of the city under the escort of Mayor Stokely's police, and their allies, the ballot stuffers, were unable to accomplish, was finished up by this systematic alteration of the returns. The ring managers were too fearful of the success of their system in the interior of the state, else they would not have cumulated their frauds to such a height in Philadelphia. They have at last over-reached themselves. It only remains now for the noble men who have engaged in the work of exposing their villainy to pursue them to justly merited punishment. The investigations should not halt in Philadelphia, but should be extended throughout the state until it shall be shown to all the people that Hartranft, in spite of his majority of thirty-five thousand, is a fraudulently elected governor.

This, then, is the glorious political victory of the ring in October! This is the triumph of crime which was flashed throughout the country as the verdict of Pennsylvania on the night of the election. These revised returns of the Philadelphia vote will have a fascinating but gloomy interest for the candidate who profits so largely by the frauds which they expose. General Hartranft by their light will discern more clearly the true judgment of the people of Philadelphia on his official conduct in the office of auditor general. He will see how his majority was raised two hundred in a precinct by two strokes of a scoundrel's pen—one stroke adding a hundred to his count, and the other taking a hundred from Mr. Buckalew. If this exposure shows how strong the distrust of of him by the people of Philadelphia, it at the same time presents touching proofs of the affection in which he is held by the forgers of election returns. He will soon have an opportunity of evincing the strength of his gratitude towards those who raised his majority to twenty thousand.—Harrisburg Patriot.

Honor to the young ladies of Portland (Me.) High School! The first class girls (first class in every sense) have resolved to dress plainly and to dispense with dress parade on examination day. If they indulge in jewelry, it will be to a very limited extent. Lace they entirely abandon. But we have something to tell about them even better than this. They have solemnly determined to refrain, upon all occasions and under the severest temptations, from the use of slang phrases and expressions. We shouldn't wonder if the marriageable youth of the United States kept a special eye on that remarkable school.

Truth is stranger than fiction. The remark has been made before, but it is now emphatically made again. What is the reader say to the corpse of a young lady in Ohio getting out of her coffin, going into the next room and speaking faintly to the watchers? Of course it was a shock to the watchers, but they had the presence of mind to take immediate measures for the restoration of their friend to full life; and at the last accounts she was doing well and likely to recover.

We encounter a neat little snake story. A gentleman in Des Arc, Ark., recently discovered two big rattlesnakes engaged in battle. But they were unequally matched, for one was five feet long with seventeen rattles, and the other six feet with twenty-six rattles. Both were killed—one by the spectator, and the other by his wounds. We mention this contest because it is said to be the first ever observed between these reptiles.

Girls, don't talk slang! If it is necessary that any one of the family should do that, let it be your big brother, though we would advise him not to use "pigeon English" when there is an elegant, systemized language that he can just as well use. But don't you do it. You can have no idea how it sounds to ears unused or averse to it, to hear a young lady when she is asked if she will go some place with you, answer, "not much?" or, if requested to do something which she does not wish to, say, "can't see it!"

Which is Correct? A Question for the People.—A little newspaper in Ohio, and to whose little Editor our Senator pays $2 per year, calls Mr. Rutan an "illustrious statesman," while the Crawford county Republican, edited by J. W. H. Reisinger, talks in this wise: Rutan, of Beaver, ran nearly five hundred behind his ticket in his own county. This is a well merited rebuke to an unprincipled demagogue. This protest was not "filed with the clerk."

Both of the newspapers here referred to are straight republican "party organs," and it will perplex the people to ascertain which one of them speaks the truth. As to ourself, our mind is made up.

Air Your Beds.—Some advocates for excessive neatness have the beds made up immediately after they are vacated. It is not healthy. They need to air for a couple of hours. Open the windows as wide as possible, and set open the doors also. Unless there is a thorough draught, there is no true ventilation of a sleeping room. The only exception to this rule is during high winds, when the door can not safely remain open, and in very wet and foggy weather.

A Runaway Team.—On last Saturday a two horse team standing in front of Mr. Thos. Allison's store in this place, took fright, and started down street at a headlong speed. Fortunately the wagon happened to be locked, and the lines pretty tightly fastened to a portion of the wagon when the team started. After running a couple of hundred yards, with a wagon whose wheels revolved rather heavily, they came to a stand and were taken in charge again by their owner. Little or no damage was done.

The McDaniel Mystery.—There have been no developments in reference to the disappearance of Capt. McDaniel further than what we stated in our last week's issue. An article appeared in the Pittsburgh Gazette, on last Tuesday, in which is given a slanderous report in reference to the sister of Capt. McDaniel. This article seems to have first appeared in a Boston paper, and has been copied by other papers in this part of the State. We are authorized to state that the whole story of a marriage engagement, either lately or years ago, is a fabrication, and without any shadow of truth whatever. The family is already sufficiently distressed without having slanderous stories in circulation.—Ohioonsburg Herald, Nov. 1st.

His Own Executor.—Dr. F. J. LeMoyne, of Washington, Pa., having directed in his will that $20,000 should be paid to the Missionary Association of the Congregationalists, for the establishment of a school for freedmen, at some point in the Southern States, decided, in 1870, that in view of the pressing demand of the colored people for education he would be a witness to the execution of his own will. He therefore selected Memphis as the place, and directed the association to draw for the money to build, and endow the school. The building was erected, and the school was opened in October, 1871.—Presbyterian (Phil'a, Oct. 12, '72.)

The Epizootic—"Slow Go."—The horse disease, of which every person hereabouts has heard a great deal lately, has broken out in Pittsburgh, and has occasioned great excitement in that vicinity. "Slow Go," one of the fast trotting horses at the races in Beaver a couple of weeks ago, has been quite ill with the disease for a week past, and his recovery is considered doubtful. He is owned by Theodore Kestner of Birmingham, and is looked upon everywhere as a first-class horse.

Alleged Frauds on the Ballot-Box.—On last Wednesday warrants were issued for the arrest of William Sims and Thomas Proudlock, both of Industry, this county, for voting on alleged fraudulent naturalization papers in that township, at the election held on the 24 Tuesday of October. Both are Englishmen and are laborers in the coal mines near that village. The papers on which they voted, it is rumored, were "ground out" in Philadelphia, dated in 1869, and sent to Industry by mail.

S. B. Briggs, of the same place, was also arrested on last Friday morning, as a party to the procuring of the naturalization papers above referred to. Sims, Proudlock and Briggs have all given bail for appearance at court..

One or two parties, whose names we have not learned, but living in New Sewickley township, have also been arrested for offering to buy votes for certain candidates at the October election.

We are glad to see these efforts made in behalf of the purity of the ballot box. Men who disregard the sanctity that should surround the elective franchise, ought to be punished with great severity.

The Law on Strays.—We have frequently been interrogated as to the law on strays, and as frequently been compelled to acknowledge our own ignorance on the subject. Determined to do our best to dispel the mist and ignorance beloading this subject we employed a legal gentleman to examine the subject and furnish our readers with the law in the case. After much research we have the following, which we think a clear and comprehensive recitation and compilation of the various enactments on that subject. Our lawyer spared neither time nor trouble nor we expense in its publication and we offer it to our readers confident that the information therein contained is the law and they will be safe in following the instructions therein given.—Huntingdon Monitor.

"If any person shall discover upon his, her or their improved and enclosed lands, any stray cattle, horse or sheep, it shall and may be lawful for such person or persons to take up the same; and it shall be the duty of such person or persons to give notice (neglect to give notice to the owner, when known works a forfeiture of all damages; and entitles the owner to the stray, without recompense to the party injured) thereof to the stray, if he or she can be readily found; but if otherwise, such persons as aforesaid shall, within four days, shall deliver to the town clerk aforesaid a particular description of the color and marks, natural or artificial, of such stray or strays, in writing or other satisfactory way; and for every neglect or refusal to do the same, he or she shall forfeit and pay the sum of five dollars, to be recovered as debts of a similar amount are by law recoverable; and it shall be the duty of the town clerk, subject to like penalty for neglect or refusal to make an entry of the same in the book aforesaid, for which entry so made the said clerk shall receive for each head of horse kind, fifty cents, and for each head of cattle, twenty-five cents, for every sheep six cents; to be paid by the person delivering such notice aforesaid; and such person may detain such stray or strays until the owner thereof shall reimburse him or her the expenses of such entry, which shall not exceed the sum of six cents per mile; to be estimated from the residence of the person taking up such stray or strays to the place of keeping the book aforesaid, and also pay all reasonable charges for three publications of such notice, and all reasonable expenses for keeping such stray or strays as well as the damage which may have been done by the same.

2. If the owner of any such stray or strays taken up as aforesaid, shall appear and neglect or refuse to make or tender a reasonable satisfaction to the party injured for the damages sustained by such trespass, and for the cost of keeping such stray, shall not accept the said satisfaction, it shall be lawful for either of the parties aforesaid to complain to any justice of the peace, of the proper township and county, where such stray shall be taken up as aforesaid, who shall, upon such complaint and application, issue his warrant, directed to three disinterested and honest freeholders of the neighborhood, commanding and enjoining them forthwith to view the trespass, to value and appraise the same having due regard for sufficiency of the fence of such enclosure, with the expense and cost of keeping such stray or strays; to make a report thereof to him, the said justice, with all convenient speed; which said valuation and appraisement and return they the said freeholders are hereby enjoined and required to make according; and if the said valuation and appraisement shall not amount to more than the sum of money tendered to the party injured as a recompense for the damage done; as aforesaid, before such complaint made, the said justice shall give judgment for the same only to the party refusing such tender, and award reasonable costs; but if the said valuation shall amount to more than the sum tendered, or if no such tender be made, then, and in that case, the said justice shall award and give judgment for the valuation aforesaid; (to be estimated from the time of giving notice as aforesaid) against the other party, and shall award execution upon every such judgment; with costs of suit accordingly. Provided, That the valuation and appraisement come within the jurisdiction of said justice, but if not; then the said damage shall be recovered as debts of an equal amount are by law recoverable; And provided always, That if no owner for any such stray shall have been found within thirty days after the same shall have been taken up, then, and in that case, the person taking up the same shall not be entitled to receive any compensation for the damages done by the same, unless he shall, within six days thereafter, have given notice to three disinterested freeholders to value and ascertain the amount of the same, which they are hereby authorized and required to do forthwith, and to make report thereof, on oath or affirmation, to any justice of the proper township, who shall, when the owner of such stray shall be found upon his or her neglect or refusal to pay the same, give judgment and award execution with costs as aforesaid. And provided also, that if the amount or the said appraisement and valuation be not within the jurisdiction of a justice of the peace, the same damage may be sued before any court of competent jurisdiction, and in all cases before a justice. The defendant or plaintiff shall have like benefit of stay of execution or appeal, as is given under the existing laws relating to justices of the peace.

3. If no owner shall appear within thirty days after any such stray shall have been taken up, it shall be the duty of the person taking up the same to cause an advertisement, particularly describing such stray, to be published at least in one newspaper in the proper county, if any there be, but if otherwise, to publish the same by written or printed advertisements, which shall be put up at six or more public places in the county, if no owner shall appear and make out his or her property in the said stray or strays within [ninety] days after the publication of such advertisements as aforesaid, the person taking up the same may be offered, it shall be the duty of such injured party to make immediate application to any justice of the peace, of the proper county, who shall proceed upon such application in the manner directed by the act to which this is a supplement.

5. And if the owner shall not have appeared within sixty days after such advertisement and publication, the person taking up the same shall make application to a justice of the peace, and the same proceedings shall be had as are directed by the act to which this is a supplement, and so much of the act to which this is a supplement as is hereby altered, is hereby repealed.

6. If any person or persons taking up any stray or strays, shall neglect to give notice as is herein before directed, he, she, or they, so offending shall forfeit all right and title to, or recovery of any sum or sums of money for any trespass committed by the same, but shall deliver up the said stray or strays so detained to the owner thereof, without any recompense, fee or reward whatsoever.

7. That the provisions of the act of the 13th day of April, 1866, together with its supplements relating to strays, be, and the same are extended to mules.

The Ladies' Bazaar.

NEW BRIGHTON, Nov. 8; 1872.

ED. ARGUS:—This place of amusement opened in aid of St. Joseph's new church, New Brighton is still in progress, and promises to be a success. The display of articles is good, and the trade in them at the various booths is very lively. Since the election is over the attendance is on the increase—a good proof that the bazaar is an interesting place to visit. The contests between the different candidates for the various articles are quite spirited. Among many things competed for we notice a handsome gold pen, lady's gold watch, garnet ring, silver-mounted revolver and a set of cane bottomed chairs, for which the candidates are working like beavers. Madame Rumor says the voters are coming in thick and fast for the respective clerks of the axe and file works of Beaver Falls. New Brighton is not yet heard from. For the other objects there is, we are pleased to learn, a similar earnestness to win. The Bazaar will continue until Saturday, the 19th inst, when it will close with an oyster supper, at the moderate price of 50 cents a ticket, including admission. The guests will be entertained with good music on the occasion. A cordial invitation is extended to the public.

Some of our Ministers and Justices of the Peace complain that we sometimes get wrong names in marriage notices sent us. Well, it is usual, we know, to blame any and all mistakes upon the "poor printer," but this is not always either just or right. We frequently receive notices of this kind written in such a hand that none but a compositor who has spent a session or two at "guessing school," can make anything out of the illegible scrawling. This is often the result of thoughtlessness on the part of those sending the same, who think that "of course the Local will know them." This is a mistake; we are not acquainted with each particular Miss Smith, Jones or Brown, and their respective christian names, in the whole country, and are therefore liable to get Sallie for Sarah, or Betsey for Belle, when we "have to guess at it." But to "err is human, to forgive divine." Send us all the hymenials as soon as performed, and the cakes as often as possible.

The New House of Refuge.—The Board of Managers of the Western Pa. House of Refuge have already commenced operations for the erection of the buildings of the new institution, to be located at Morganza, in this county. The contracts for the brick and stone work have been given to Pittsburgh firms, and shanties are now being put up for the use of workmen. We learn that it is estimated that the buildings will cost over $200,000, and will be among the finest and most complete of the kind in the country. The work will be pushed vigorously.—*Wash. A Baby without an Owner.—One day last week a strange lady left a bright black haired baby of a few weeks of age with Mrs. Neal, of the Rochester House, Rochester Pa., saying as she went away that she wanted to go to the station on some errand, and would return in a few moments for her child. She never returned, and the pretty little waif is cruelly torn from its mother's breast and left to the maternal tenderness of those who; having no children of their own, may wish to adopt it. What disposition will be made of it we do not know. —Radical.

NEW-BRIGHTON, Nov. 8, 1872.

ED. ARGUS:—I do not know who your correspondent "Nicodemus" is, nor do I know who are referred to as "Sargent" and "Scippy," but I conclude that "Scippy" is accustomed to the use of slang phrases, and is always ready to give a "nick-name" to any person of whom he speaks. I am glad "Nicodemus" touched him up so gracefully on those abominable practices. "Hanging a mule's ear" on any one is bad enough, but when it comes to speaking of prominent men, as "Bill," "Aleck," "Stan," and "Jim," it is simply an advertisement that the speaker is illiterate, vulgar, and low-bred. If "Scippy" is not aware of it, perhaps he had better be told, that even moderately well bred people use the term "Mr." when speaking of another, unless that other has some civil or military title which may then be substituted for the "Mr." AGRIPPA.

The Shutting Down Movement in the Oil Regions from a Religious Stand-Point.—The Pittsburgh Presbyterian Banner, of last week, has an article on the shutting down movement in the oil regions which takes a view of the case that may not have occurred to the good people of the Oil Regions. He says: "The efforts lately made in the oil regions to stop excessive production, in order to secure remunerative prices, and in a fair way to bring about at least one beneficial result. Formerly it was vehemently urged that to close up the wells on the Sabbath was highly injurious, because of its tendency to divert the oil into other channels or to close up the little crevices or in some way to check the flow on other days. But the proposal to cease work and close up the wells for thirty days at once, is an admission that no evil results of any importance can accrue to their producing power from not being worked. It has not been contended so far as we have noticed, by a single speaker or writer, that the wells would receive any harm from the course which has been adopted. Therefore, it is unfair to insist on the old argument in behalf of the continuance of labor on the Sabbath.

But this is not all; the demand for a cessation of thirty days is a confession of over-production. Now if the oil men had rested on the Sabbath 'according to the Commandment,' there would have been fifty-two days in the year without production, and consequently, according to the arguments now used, there would have been no over production, and at the same time remunerative prices would have been maintained. A stoppage of thirty days is now required by the necessities of trade, because fifty-two days in the year were wrested from the especial service of God. In this as well as in other instances, it is no gain to disobey God; to disregard His authority is a losing business even in its worldly aspects.

We are glad to learn that a movement is now on foot among the oil men to enter into an agreement that hereafter all wells shall be stopped up from Saturday evening at six o'clock until Monday morning at the same hour. In this way over-production will be avoided, the operatives will have time for rest and moral and religious improvement, and the laws of the country as well as the laws of God will be observed. All Christians and Philanthropists should exert themselves to give encouragement to those who are laboring to bring about this change, which would add as events plainly show, to the pecuniary advantage of the producers and their employees, and what is still greater value, it will do much to maintain good order and to induce the people to listen to the message of salvation, and to become partakers of its blessedness.

Court commenced its sessions in Beaver on last Monday. The attendance is not unusually large. Proceedings will be given in our next issue.

Burglary and Mystery.—The town of Beaver Falls was in a considerable state of excitement on Saturday morning last, owing to the fact of a noted burglar having been captured by Mr. Parot, the faithful and corrageous book-keeper of Mr. Duncan—Dry Goods merchant of that place—the previous night. It appears Mr. Parot had been to a party, and was absent from the store until 12 o'clock, when he returned to retire to rest. Seeing the door ajar, he was about entering when the burglar knocked him out upon the pavement; recovering himself he immediately gave chase and, as he thought most likely, the burglar fell over a sand pile that lay in the way of his escape, when the clerk jumped on the prostrate thief and commenced punishing him on the head with the store key; and finally, after a severe struggle, succeeded in reducing him to a state of quietness and submission. The burglar gave his name as Thomas Grant. He was taken into the store and his wounds dressed. Sunday morning he was committed to the Beaver jail to answer at court. Although offered great inducements, he could not be induced to 'blow' on any of his 'pals.' The keys found with him were calculated to open the door of any business house in Beaver Falls. He claims New-York city as his home.

The appearance of a curious looking boat on the Ohio river, near Beaver, and the fact of its stopping between Beaver and Industry for the last three or four weeks, and being occupied by two or three suspicious looking roughs and a woman, causes a considerable amount of anxiety, especially since burglaries are so frequent in our midst. Add to this, also, the actions of a singular looking woman who tramps the vicinity with a basket of what at first sight appears to be lace but upon closer investigation to be goods of more considerable value in the way of silks, silver-ware, linen, &c. which she sells at merely a nominal value, representing that she lived in England only a few weeks ago, and had smuggled these goods over by pretending they were for her own use, and as the goods she offers are cut, her story to some would seem plausible. She tells some, that she lives in Beaver Falls, others, in Rochester. At all events, she carries a considerable sum of money with her, and seems very anxious that no one should tell how cheap she sells goods.

Remarkable Result of a Rattlesnake Bite.—We came into possession recently of some facts touching the bite of a rattlesnake in this county, a long time ago. The circumstances are as follows: Mr. Joseph McDaniel of North Sewickley township, this county, was bitten by one of these poisonous reptiles about 30 years ago. The snake struck him in the leg, near the ankle. He suffered much pain soon afterwards, and it was generally believed that he would die from the effect of the wound. He lived however, but for a great many years afterwards his leg would swell up five or six times each year, and he would be confined to his house for weeks at a time. Then the swelling would leave the limb, and Mr. M. would go about as usual. These alternations went on until about two years before his death, which took place some eighteen months ago. Two years before he died all traces of the bite disappeared from his leg; but it seems the poison then permeated his whole body, for shortly after this he took his bed, sick, seemingly all over, and scarcely ever left it again for two years, at which time death ended his 28 or 30 years suffering.

A Card.—The undersigned resumes the Editorship of The Tribune, which he relinquished on embarking in another line of business six months ago. Henceforth, it shall be his endeavor to make this a thoroughly independent journal, treating all parties and political movements with judicial fairness and candor, but courting the favor and deprecating the wrath of no one.

If he can hereafter say anything that will tend to heartily unite the whole American People on the broad platform of Universal Amnesty and Impartial Suffrage, he will gladly do so. For the present, however, he can best commend that consummation by silence and forbearance. The victors in our late struggle can hardly fail to take the whole subject of Southern rights and wrongs into early and earnest consideration, and to them, for the present, he remits it.

Since he will never again be a candidate for any office, and is not in full accord with either of the great parties which have hitherto divided the country, he will be able and will endeavor to give wider and steadier regard to the progress of Science, Industry, and the useful Arts, than a partisan journal can do; and he will not be provoked to indulgence in those bitter personalities which are the recognized bane of journalism. Sustained by a generous public, he will do his best to make The Tribune a power in the broader field it now contemplates, as, when Human Freedom was imperiled, it was in the arena of political partisanship.

Respectfully, HORACE GREELEY.
New-York, Nov. 6, 1872.

The Hay Crop.—Now that the figures are all in, it would appear that there is not so great a deficiency in the hay crop as was anticipated. In the East, where most of our supplies come from, there is little less than a full crop; while west of the Alleghenies there is a higher average than usual. In Pennsylvania we have not as much as usual, and south of us, in Maryland and Virginia, there is the worst perhaps they have ever had for many years. The short supplies in Pennsylvania are, however, more than made up by the increasing attention which has been given to saving and curing corn-fodder; which when well made is for many purposes equal to the best hay. The effort to make good fodder has been well seconded by the clerk of the weather. There has not been so fine a season for many years both for properly maturing the corn and for allowing attention to be given to properly curing the herbage. Altogether we conclude that though the price of hay in Philadelphia will be pretty well maintained, the very high figures anticipated in the spring will hardly be reached. —Germantown Telegraph.

The Horse Disease.—As the horse disease is raging with great violence in Pittsburgh, it is not at all improbable that it will sooner or later develope itself in the country districts hereabouts. A word of caution to the owners of horses likely to contract the disease may not be out of place thus early. In all probability the epidemic will leave them tender and more susceptible to cold. Had the disease occurred in spring, the warm months of summer would have afforded them a fine opportunity to recover without much risk of permanent injury. But winter and spring are approaching with their changeable and trying weather; and it is fair to presume that ten times more horses will be destroyed by imprudence during the present inclement season than by the present epidemic. Some farriers will say that the animals will recover immediately, without leaving any weakness about them, and their owners may congratulate themselves on the prospects; but it is best to run no risk. The necessity of taking more than usual care will be manifest. Such care may save many a noble beast from death and many a dollar to the owner's pocket, thereby preventing a material rise in the horse market for two or three years to come. Comfortable stables; warm blankets (especially under exposure), good diet, and the avoiding of overwork, will go far to prevent such loss. The golden rule, with a slight alteration, will apply here: "Do unto your horses as you would have your horses do unto you."

New Law Firm.—We understand that our friends Jas. Cameron and J. Y. Marks, have formed a partnership for the practice of law, and have erected a commodious office in Rochester where they intend establishing themselves for the future. It is needless to say that we wish them plenty of clients, liberal fees, and general prosperity.

Change in the Commissioner's Office.—On last Saturday Joseph Brittain, esq., who has served the people of the county for the last three years in the commissioner's office, retired and his successor D. Neeley, esq., was sworn in. Mr. B. has made an efficient officer, and we doubt not that Mr. Neeley will also discharge the duties of the position with credit to himself and benefit to the county. Both, the old and the new officers, have our hearty wishes for future prosperity.

For the Beaver Argus.

Written on the death of "Willie," son of Mr. Will, and Lizzie Pierce, of Beaver Falls, Penn'a. By Maggie E. Nye; while at Dr. Shepard's Water Cure, Columbus, Ohio.

List, list; for softly treads the downy winged Angel, as it rapidly wends its way from home to home, taking parents, children, brothers, or sisters. But we will wait a moment and see, where this most unwelcome guest will make its next visit. There, silently it has entered that small, unbroken, family circle, and placed its strong and iron fingers upon their little, precious, darling babe; perhaps an idolized one. Why ah; why art thou going to snatch this fair child away? But why ask the question: for do we not naturally going to a bed or mound of flowers, love to pluck the most beautiful, and sweetest bud, or flower we observe? Similar to what God loves to do; to take the loveliest and the best. He smiles and sweetly says—"Suffer on thou little, patient sufferer, only for a short time, and I will ease thy pain." And while loved ones are weeping around that little crib, quietly He sends the Saviour, whose hand touches that tiny heart and it vibrates not; and the pulse stands still—another touch and he ceases to breathe, and baby Willie is no more. The bud perhaps too beautiful and fair to bloom on this cold, harsh earth of ours, or perhaps, around which the parents too fondly clung, has been plucked and tenderly carried off to bloom in a fair clime above. Mourn no more, thou loving parents; for 'tis a tie, a link taken from the terrestrial chain to bind you nearer to Him, who is able to give, also to take away.

Silently the Saviour came
With His endearing charms,
And from your happy household,
Took Willie in his arms.
Up with the shining Angels,
He has taken him to be;
And sad, and dreary, must be your home
For he will ne'er return to thee.

But soon ah, soon the gale will land you
Over on that lonely shore,
Where the Saviour will give you Willie,
And from him you will part no more.
Now look up thou fond sad parents,
Weep not o'er that little mound;
For your Willie is up in heaven
Though he was laid beneath the ground.

MR. EDITOR:—Please publish the following

Biography of J. B. Hays.

The Press man proposes to let me alone in the future; I am sorry that I cannot do the same with him; but, for the good of society, I am forced to air up a little of his unpublished history. Firstly, he never paid the Huron House ladies for his board when he first came to New-Brighton, and they had to sue him lately before Esquire Glass, and he said he would appeal it to Court within the last week. And he has never paid the premium on the insurance which he contracted nearly two years ago, with the Farmers of York, Pa. He received three thousand dollars at the fire in February, 1870, and would not then pay his insurance to the Agent; although the presses and type in the office at that time were really not worth over one thousand dollars. And it has always been a mystery to me, why that roll of carpet should have been brought out of the back-room into the front-room during the afternoon of the evening before the fire. Why was this thus, John? But the richest private history of J. B. H. is still in store. The sequel to the "Pistol" I think can be aired without detriment to any resident in New-Brighton before Christmas. And also John B. as a champion dodger. I am sorry John; but we must have a little fun, even if Greeley was defeated.

Yours, as ever,
WILLIAM OF OAKLAND.

Bro. Quay as a Poet.—It is said that Bro. Quay, in addition to being a political manipulator, is also a poet. Here is the result of one of his efforts since the election. We give it a place in our columns not because of its intrinsic worth, but because local items are exceedingly hard to find:

"The bass horn of the bull frog has ceased to blow, the stake-driver sings not in the meadow low, the katydid's hurdy-gurdy has stopped its flow, and the fire-fly's lamp no more will show the cricket how to tune his old banjo. Cause; winter is coming.

The Scranton Times offers the following suggestions for the incoming legislature of this State:

"There is one thing we wish to see attended to at Harrisburg this winter, and that is to have the price of legislators raised to some sort of decent price. As it now is we have to blush every time we talk with a New York man on the subject of legislation. While legislators at Albany are worth from $1,000 to $10,000 per head, the same article here can be bought for from $5 to $50 each. When we consider the great wealth and monied interests of our State, this is a most humiliating comparison. We call upon all our senators and members of the assembly who have any State pride, not to sell themselves one cent short of the ruling rates at Albany. The dignity of our State must be maintained and in order to do it we must show the country that we have as valuable legislators as can be furnished by any other State in the Union.

PITTSBURGH MARKETS.

OFFICE OF THE PITTSBURGH GAZETTE,
MONDAY, Nov. 11, 1872.

Business in all its various branches is badly crippled by the horse epidemic, and the worst feature lies in the fact that there is not much prospect of an immediate improvement. There is an increased demand for nearly all the leading commodities, and those houses that are still enabled to deliver goods have all they can do, and that, too, at very full prices. There was considerable grumbling a few weeks ago, about money being tight, but that, while bad enough, was nothing compared with the epizootic.

THE KANSAS JAYHAWK.

BY J. J. INGALLS.

The Audubon of the twentieth century, as he compiles the history of the birds of Kansas, will vainly search the "Ornithological Biographies" of his illustrious predecessor for any illusion to the "jayhawk." Investigation will disclose the jay (cyanurus cristatus) and the hawk (accipeter.iuscus); the former a mischievous, quarrelsome egg-sucker, a blue-coated cousin of the crow and an epicure of carrion; the latter a cloud-haunting pirate, the assassin of the atmosphere, whose flattened skull, rapacious beak and insatiable appetite for blood impel it to an agency of destruction, and place it among the repulsive ranks of the living ministers of death. Were it not that nature forbids the adulterous confusion of her types, he might surmise that the jayhawk was a mule among birds, the illicit offspring of some sudden liason or aerial intrigue, endowed with the most malign attributes of its progenitors. But as this conclusion would be unerringly rejected by the deductions of his science, he would be compelled to look elsewhere for the origin of this obscure tenant of the air, whose notable exploits caused it to be accepted as the symbol of the infant State, giving to a famous regiment its title, and to its inhabitants their novel appellation of "jayhawkers," by that happy nomenclature which would induce the unsophisticated chronicler to suppose that the population of Illinois was composed entirely of infants at the breast, and that the chief vegetable productions of Missouri were ipecac and lobelia.

The jayhawk is a creation of mythology. Every nation has its myths, human and animal, some of which disappear as the State matures, while others continue to stand out upon its early horizon in conspicuous proportions enlarged rather than diminished by the distance that intervenes.

The infancy and childhood of communities, as well as that of individuals, abound in legends and traditions which become crystalized by time into a mythology in which qualities become personified, and the forces and operations of nature are symbolized as living beings, so that history like the nursery has its Mother Goose's Melodies whose idle rhymes were sung at the cradle of the race.

In the twilight of time the domain of fact insensibly yields to the shadowy realm of fable; the true and the false are confounded; the real is indistinguishable from the imaginary; and out of the confusions is born a brood of phantoms and chrimeras, centaurs, demi-gods and goddesses, heroes and monsters, phœnixes and jayhawks, that under different names have peopled the early times of every nation since the world began. In this strange procreation, beauty becomes Venus; strength, Hercules; appetite, Bacchus; manhood in its glory, Apollo; and the elements thenusglves are endowed with sentiment life.

The process is not, as we are apt to imagine, peculiar to the races of antiquity but is witnessed in the history of every community, great or small, which attempts the experiment of an independent existence. The realism of later days sometimes strips these phantasms of their insubstantial vestments and reveals their native deformity, as the traveler with his lens detects upon the distant summit which seems but a deeper stain on the forehead of the morning sky, its ragged garb of forest and its gray scalp of rock; but generally they become more respectable with age. They are accepted as facts. Poetry decorates them with its varnish. Orators cover them with a rhetorical veneer, and they are incorporated into the general literature of the country.

Had an irreverend Athenian ventured to doubt Silenus or denounce Priapus, he would probably have been received with a stormy outcry like that which greeted Bancroft when he ventured to disclose the truth about some of the early paragons of American history. And yet it cannot be denied that the popular notion of the founders of the government are as purely mythological as the dream of Jupiter and Minerva. With what awe in our boyhood did we contemplate the name of Washington! That benign and tranquil though somewhat stolid visage, looks down upon us from a serene atmosphere unstained with earthly passion. That venerable fame bears no taint of mortal frailty save in the juvenile episode of the hatchet, in which the venal error is expiated by the immortal candor of its confession. To our reverting fancy, the massive form wrapped in military cloak stands forever at midnight upon the frozen banks of the Delaware, watching the patriotic troops cross the icy current in the darkness before the grand morning of Trenton; or else arrayed in block velvet small clothes resigning his commission to the Continental Congress at Annapolis.

We learn in riper years, with grief not unmingled with incredulity, that this great man was subject to ungoverable outbreaks of rage, that he swore like a mule-driver, and that he was not only the father of his Country, but also of Governor Posey of Indiana.

With such disheartening examples before us, it is not unreasonable to believe that the student of Kansas history a hundred years hence; as he reverts from the men and manners of that degenerate time to the first splendid lustre of his native State, will turn to Genesis, vi., 4, for consolation, and say with a sigh; "There were giants in those days." The colossal characters nurtured in the primeval convulsions of our politics will have passed into mythology. Tradition will have lent its pensive charm to the eloquence of Carney, the unquenchable fire of Crawford, Lane's impregnable virtue, Lowe's aggressive vigor, the sensitive honor of Carke—that tall young oak of the Kaw whose acorns fattened the swine in Cedarville—sly, Caldwell, who proudly rose in his seat in the United States Senate in '72 and hurled back with indignation the charge that he bought his Senatorial toga at a political slop-shop—ah, who could forbear to admit that there were indeed giants in the earth in those days!

This was the close of the epoch when the jayhawk flew into the troubled atmosphere. It was an early bird and it caught many a Missouri worm. The worms did not object to the innocent amusement of the bird, but they insisted that public opinion must and should be respected.

But the bird had a mission. It could not be caught with chaff, nor would it allow salt to be put on its tail. It pursued its ministry of retribution, protection and vengeance through many bloody years, till the worms were fain to concede the superiority of their feathered antagonist and adopt the sentiment of the popular melody, "O, birdy I am tired now."—Kansas Magazine.

—It has always been supposed that England carried off the banner for supreme ignorance of American geography, but such is not the case. A Paris paper describes the Victoria Bridge over the St. Lawrence as "extending from the shores of Portland, in Maine, to Port Sarnia, near Lake Huron." The Canadians build awful long bridges.

—Thus far during the present year 520,000,000 postage stamps have been completed, those made in January numbering 76,000,000. Thirty-eight and a half millions have been completed in a week, and thirteen millions in a single day. Three times as many three cent stamps are used as of all denominations combined; after them come the one cent and then the two and six cent.

The Impudence of Sam Josephs.

The Pittsburgh Post calls attention editorially to a speech recently made in Philadelphia by Sam Josephs, in which that worthy is reported to have said:

"At Reading, Alderman M'Mullin and I could have nominated General Cass, but we came to the rescue of Buckalew; and, by our influence, made him the nominee. Does any man dare to say that we nominated this man incorruptible, for corrupt motives?"

We happen to know something about the conduct of Josephs and M'Millen at Reading. Some weeks before that convention we happened to meet them both on Chestnut street, in Philadelphia; and, somewhat to our surprise, found them favorable to the nomination of Mr. Buckalew. This was before Mr. Buckalew had consented to be made a candidate.—After the Williamsport convention, we met them both in Philadelphia, and to our surprise again, they were not for Buckalew. When the Reading convention assembled we asked Mr. Josephs what had led him to change his mind. His answer spoke volumes. Said he: "I don't think Buckalew is the right man for Governor. He would wrap himself up in his dignity and we could not approach him. If any of our boys got into trouble he would let them lie in the penitentiary instead of pardoning them: We could do nothing for them."

The "boys" to whom Josephs alluded are such fellows as Mara, whom he and M'Mullin succeeded in inducing Governor Geary to pardon. Josephs was right when he declared that Buckalew would not prostitute the pardoning power at the bidding of such fellows as himself and M'Mullin. Neither of them voted for him at Reading until the sixth ballot, when his nomination was certain; and there seems to be no doubt that they both gave Hartranft a hearty support. Hartranft will not "wrap himself up in his dignity," will not be unapproachable, and will not fail to use the pardoning power as unscrupulously for political purposes as money was used to secure his election. Before the State election it was well known that the dangerous classes in Philadelphia, the men who are hanging on the verge of crime and in constant dread of the law, were going in a body for Hartranft. That they were promised protection in crime we have no doubt, and we have just as little doubt that it will be as freely exteneed to them. Bill Mann will take care that the "boys" are not hardly pressed in the criminal courts which are under his control, and when he fails to prevent convictions, Hartranft will be ready to pardon at the solicitation of such supporters as Josephs and M'Mullin.

The Sublime and Beautiful.

No grander or more sublime subject can engage the attention of man than such a one as tends to the amelioration of suffering and pain. The cure of Consumption, not only in its incipiency, but in its advanced stages, has been done by Dr. Keyser's Lung Cure. Sometimes the Lung Cure will do this alone; it will always do good. Sometimes the Doctor supplies other medicines with it to meet peculiar indications of the system. In his large medicine establishment are to be found all the fine medicines known, and an experiance of nearly half a century has enabled the doctor to know how to use them.

Being a graduate of two schools of medicine, to which he has added over twenty five years of experience, together with a daily reading and practice in chronic diseases, with special attention to those of the lungs, it would be a matter of wonder if he did not know the treatment of such cases to a more than ordinary extent. His pamphlet on chronic lung diseases, sent free whenever it is ordered, discourses more fully upon the subject than could be allowed in any news paper article. Where your druggist does not keep Dr. Keyser's Lung Cure, 4 bottles will be sent by express for $5. Single bottles $1,50 at the Dr's Medical Office, 167 Liberty street, Pittsburgh. Office hours from 10 a. m. until 1 p. m., and Saturdays at night until 9.

Oldest and Best.

The Singer Sewing Machine the Pioneer of all others—Good, Better, Best, and now beyond Competition for Surpassing Excellence—The first Introduced Here.

It cannot be denied that the Singer Sewing Machine is the Pioneer of all other inventions of this description. That the inventor possessed an original mind, that most illimitable inventive power, is demonstrated by this fact of precedence, and that all other machines since brought in to use were but feint imitations and devices to avoid the patent laws. The Singer Machine was good from the first—it became better as time wore on, the wonderfully inventive faculties of the constructor of the first Sewing Machine brought in to correct defects and render them more and more adapted to the wants of a progressive age. The mind which could conceive the idea of this matchless labor saving machine, was capable of reaching a grandeur in this branch of mechanical art not attainable by others—It has now reached a point of perfection which places it far in advance of all others for simplicity and ease of working—the beauty and durability of its stitches—its adaptability to all kinds of work—and freedom from any liability to get out of repair, with other manifold advantages that render it also preferable to any and all others ever introduced. Keep the Hair Unblemished.

—"I am like an old hemlock—withered at the top," said a venerable Indian Chief pointing to his thin and bleaching locks. Thousands of men and women in civilized society, much younger than the old Sagamore, are like him, "withered at the top," simply because they have neglected to use the means of preserving and beautifying the hair which science had placed at their disposal. If LYON'S KATHAIRON be faithfully applied once or twice a day, to the fibers and the scalp, it is just as impossible that the hair should decay, wither, fall out or become harsh and fuzzy, as that a meadow newly refreshed with nightly dews and sunlit rains, should become arid and barren of green blades. This preparation not only keeps the hair alive and the skin of the head in a healthy and clean condition, but actually multiplies the filaments and imparts to them a lustre, flexibility and wavy beauty unattainable by any other mode of treatment. It does not, like the metalic and sulphurous hair dyes, dry up the natural moisture of the scalp, but supplies nutriment to the roots of the hair and vigor to the fibres.

☞ We see it stated that the Republican members of the Philadelphia delegation to the House of Representatives are said to have united on ex-Speaker Elliot for re election to the Speakership.

We sincerely hope for the credit of the Legislature and the good of the State that this is a mistake, or if it be true, that all the members outside of Philadelphia are united on a better man. The organization of the House last winter was a disgrace to the party, and there can be no excuse if the present body, which is largely composed of new members, permit Mr. Elliot and his mirmidons to repeat the disgraceful scenes of last winter. —Chambersburg Repository.

—An apostate and backsliding Mormon organization has been formed in Salt Lake. It is called the Utah Liberating League, and is taking a strong hold on the people and spreading rapidly. It is thought it will be a potent instrument in destroying the influence of the priesthood of the Mormon church.

☞ HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT—Asthma, tightness of the chest, and the various diseases of the throat and lungs, as well as the innumerable eruptions and ulcers which attack the skin and flesh, yield invariably to this preparation. Sold at 78 Maiden Lane, N. Y. Price 25cts per pot. Ask for new style, the old is counterfeited.

DON'T BE DECEIVED, But for coughs, colds, sore throat, hoarseness, and bronchial difficulties, use only Wells' Carbolic Tablets.

Worthless Imitations are on the market, but the only Scientific preparation of Carbolic Acid for Lung diseases is when chemically combined with other well known remedies, as in these TABLETS, and all parties are cautioned against using any other.

In all cases of irretation of the mucus membrane these TABLETS should be freely used, their cleansing and healing properties are astonishing.

BE WARNED, never neglect a cold, it is easily cured in its incipientstate, when it becomes chronic the cure is exceedingly difficult, use Wells' Carbolic Tablets as a specific.

Tumor of 12 Years' Growth Cured by Radway's Resolvent.

BRIDGE, Mass., July 15, 1871.

DR. RADWAY:—I have had Ovarian Tumor in the ovaries and bowels. All the Doctors said "there was no help for it." I tried every thing that was recommended; but nothing helped me. I saw your Resolvent, and thought I would try it; but had no faith in it, because I had suffered for twelve years. I used six bottles of the Resolvent, and one box of Radway's Pills, and two bottles of your Ready Relief; and there is not a sign of tumor to be seen or felt, and I feel better, smarter, and happier than I have for twelve years. The worst tumor was in the left side of the bowels, over the groin. I write this for you to do with as you please. You can publish it if you choose. HANNAH F. KNAPP.
